REPORT
2019

MISSION

The mission of the Roncalli International Foundation is to manifest the compassion and the Providence of God to the most destitute people of the developing world in an effort to relieve the hardship caused by injustice and natural disasters.

VISION

We work to build very close partnerships with international cooperation agencies (ICA) as well as with religious and lay missionaries, who carry out projects that help local communities and churches discover their resources, improve their living conditions and stimulate growth.

MESSAGE FROM THE PRESIDENT

2019: A PIVOTAL YEAR IN OUR HISTORY AND FOR OUR FUTURE

The year 2019 was marked by the arrival of a new Executive Director, Danielle Valiquette, a seasoned international cooperation leader and manager with 30 years of experience in project planning, development, leadership and management. We are very happy to welcome her to the Roncalli team.

Of course, new leadership involves making some adjustments and changes, but it also brings new energy, ideas and approaches to continuing the Foundation's mission.

The year also saw changes within the Board of Directors, which went from 11 to 13 members. Sister Lorraine Costello, CND, finished her term as administrator, and we are very grateful for her commitment and dedication. We have welcomed to our ranks Sister Monique Courchesne, CND, whose extensive experience as a missionary in Latin America will be of great benefit to the board, and Mrs Esther Savoie and Mrs Élizabéth Meloche, who have both been very active in various board activities.

In 2019, we visited religious communities to better understand their needs and plan for the future. Carrying out their mission abroad to help the world's poorest people is directly related to our mission, and the fact that two agreements were concluded with two religious communities is a testament to the Foundation's ability to listen to their needs and ensure the sustainability of their work abroad.

I would like to sincerely thank the members of the Foundation team for their tireless work as well as the members of the board for their continued commitment.

The Foundation will be celebrating its 40th anniversary in 2020. The Sisters of Providence got it right when they created this Foundation, which has since then helped over 3 million people by funding more than 9,700 projects in 94 countries, for a total amount of nearly $126 million.

MESSAGE FROM THE EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

39 YEARS OF KINDNESS
AND IMPACT

It is my honour and privilege to take the lead of the Foundation. I am very grateful to the members of the Board of Directors, the members of our team, our collaborators and all of our partners for their warm welcome, trust and ongoing support of our mission.

I accepted to lead the Foundation without hesitation. Inheriting a dedicated team and a highly regarded organization deserves respect and vision in order to ensure its continuity. This mission is very dear to me. For 39 years, the Foundation has generated tangible results for several millions of people. In 2019, we have started a process of strategic planning in which measuring the Foundation's impact will be essential.

We have gathered so many eloquent testimonials about the Foundation! Undeniably, the Foundation brings an added value in terms of cooperation and solidarity with the world's poorest people. With this in mind, three distinctive elements have emerged from these testimonials.

First, through concerted action with thousands of partners, the Foundation is able to reach out to the furthest and most marginalized communities — places that are off the beaten track, communities whose basic needs have not been met, victims of natural disasters or injustice, and people who have been rejected or do not have a voice.

Second, renewed and multi-year support of several partners allows us to approach a community's development issues in a systematic way. In fact, reducing poverty requires a multi-sectoral approach. By building a well for a village during the course of a year, community gardens the next year, and a laboratory in a local healthcare centre after that, you can progressively improve living conditions in a community and establish the basics that will lead to development.

Third, by helping other organizations carry out large-scale projects, the Foundation is a catalyst for major change. In fact, after granting nearly 126 million dollars, the Foundation was able to get additional funding of more than 337 million dollars. In other words, for each dollar the Foundation invests, 3 dollars more are generated. That's amazing leverage!

As we look ahead, welcome new challenges and meet the immense needs of agents of change, several pillars of the Foundation have been consolidated this year. We have notably appointed two new directors, Mrs Marilena Bioli, Director of International Projects and Mrs Anita Khouah, Director of Finances and Administration. These passionate, engaged, experienced and competent women are joining other women and men who have helped change the world in the last 39 years, one project at a time.

CONSERVATION AND PROTECTION OF THE MAYA TEXTILE ART OF INDIGENOUS WOMEN OF GUATEMALA

TRAINING

«Empowering women is the most effective development tool.» - Kofi Annan

What does it mean to empower women?

Each has their own definition of women's empowerment, a multidimensional concept that involves education, training, psychology, economics and more. For us at the Foundation, empowering women is about supporting them and giving them access to training and tools.

The ultimate goal is to provide women with ways to earn a decent living and improve their quality of life and that of their children, as well as to give them a greater ability to make decisions about their future, be heard and have an impact in their society and in the lives of other women like them.

One good example of this is a project for the empowerment of marginalized and vulnerable indigenous women carried out in 2019 in partnership with Horizons of Friendship and AFEDES (Asociación Femenina para el Desarrollo de Sacatepéquez). We supported technical training for the women to help them improve their weaving skills and build their self-confidence and self-esteem.

As part of this project, 151 Kaqchikel and K'iche' women and girls in Guatemala received training in ancestral weaving techniques needed to produce traditional Mayan textiles. In addition to the technical skills they learned to increase their family's income, the traditional aspect of weaving serves to conserve and protect of Maya cultural heritage, which is an integral part of the identity of these women.

Each one of these women has her own story. Here's a testimonial from Manuela Chicop Puac, who tells us what this project means for her.

HIGHLIGHTS

I'm married and I have a baby. I studied up until grade 7. I was interested in weaving because I learned how to weave when I was 7. I stopped because my mother died, and I was very sad. I also had to find a job. Later, I got married and I had my son. I still wanted to learn how to weave, but I couldn't because my baby was still too young. I learned that AFEDES helped women who wanted to learn how to weave, but unfortunately, I couldn't participate because I was always busy with my chores. One day, one of the instructors told me that children didn't have to get in the way of achieving my goals. Then, I decided to participate in the workshops. Weaving is wonderful work, and all it requires is my own motivation. My husband helps me so I can go to classes. This is a strong motivating factor and also reminds me of my mother. I hope that one day I'll be able to learn how to make other textiles, like clothing.

- Manuela Chicop Puac, 30 years old

PURCHASING A RICE MILL FOR RICE FARMERS IN CAPRICE

AGRICULTURE

“Give a man a fish, and you feed him for a day. Teach a man to fish, and you feed him for a lifetime.” This proverb perfectly illustrates how much agriculture projects can improve food conditions for communities in developing countries and make a lasting impression for future generations. Aside from completing a project, what matters the most to us at the Foundation is how it impacts the lives of the poorest people in the world. Their progress is our greatest source of pride, and here is an example of this.

The rural community of Lapierre in the Carice commune is in an isolated and mountainous region in Haiti’s Nord-Est department. Rice is the country’s most important crop (70%). Most residents of Lapierre are farmers, and both men and women cultivate rice in a traditional fashion. Before receiving a rice mill through this project, rice grains were husked by hand using a mortar and pestle, or women had to walk nearly 6 km to the nearest mill, which was not always available or operational.

Purchasing an electric rice mill allows the community to have a processing unit nearby. For a small price, women can mill their rice, which reduces processing time, travel costs and delays in the product’s sale, commerce being their only way to earn a living with their work.

To ensure the smooth operation and longevity of the rice mill, a shed was built to house it and a committee was constituted to ensure the management of the equipment: 40% of revenue earned from the mill’s use will go towards its maintenance.

In addition to improving the work conditions of rice farmers, this project generates income by directly hiring maintenance technicians and indirectly hiring many saleswomen who can now process the rice quickly to sell it in local markets. This also allows women to free up their time and to spend it in training or with their families.

“The entire community is grateful for your generosity. Farmers are always saying how happy your support has made them, and allowed them to achieve this important project that makes their work easier. This project will improve the economic situation of farmers.” – Brother Michel Fleury, PFST

Access to drinking water: more than 2 billion people still do not have this basic right (UN)

Access to drinking water will remain one of the Foundation's priorities as long as two billion people in developing countries must travel long distances to get to a source of water, which is all too often unsanitary.

Being able to access safe a plentiful supply of drinking water at a close distance has a direct impact on a population's health. It also saves time that could be invested in educating young people or earning a good living.

Drinking water is vital, and so is water for food!

Notatinga is a village situated in Burkina Faso's arid lands. The population mostly consists of farmers who have come together to form the Association Buud Nooma.

Farmers received technical training in sustainable farming and food processing from the Clercs de St-Viateur of Banfora in order to improve the food conditions of their community. These people can know share what they have learned with other farmers in the association. However, they still had a critical need for water.

To reverse the desertification of the area, maintain existing orchards and community gardens, and diversify production, a 40-metre well was drilled and a solar-powered pump was installed. A water management committee was also formed and all villagers have participated in workshops on sanitation. A 5000-litre water tower was also built for domestic use. This equipment can irrigate up to 10 hectares of farmland, thus ensuring the food security of 3,000 residents.

Water used to irrigate parcels of land will help to ensure the farmers' yield and the sale of fresh produce and other products processed by women, which will significantly increase the revenues of many families in the village.
